Introducing RFF

Founded in 1952, Resources for the Future (RFF) is an independent, nonprofit research institution that improves environmental, energy, and natural resource decisions through impartial economic research and policy engagement. RFF is committed to being the most widely trusted source of research insights and policy solutions leading to a healthy environment and a thriving economy.

RFF is among the few credible sources of economic and policy analysis respected by leaders on both sides of the aisle and by corporate and environmental stakeholders. This diverse community values our commitment to facts, our innovative ideas, and our capacity to provide valuable insights for key policy discussions.

Our Washington, DC-based staff of 80 is augmented by a network of partners at leading universities and research institutions around the world. Together, this community of experts examines a wide variety of topics from climate change, energy, electricity, and transportation to forest management, water resources, and natural disaster risk mitigation.

If you believe that current environmental challenges deserve independent investigation and innovative, practical solutions, become an RFF supporter today.
